Webster and Slavery.

We speak of the "times that tried men's souls" in the past tense when the present would be quite as proper. Those times are not all by-gone they are here now. Men are tried by them daily, and some are found wanting.

At such a crisis as the present, there is no safe light but that of principle. He who tries to be | bales, of which 11,000 were taken on speculation guided by any other, will err in the fruitless vague or land himself and his followers in the ditch. Expediency may dictate the steps to be taken, but it must be principle that determines the end. From adelphia and Baltimore, 27s a 23s 6d. that end no man can securely swerve.

He is a true statesman who gathers wisdon from an intimate rapport with the People, and who. Old, wanted. Pork is in demand, at prices for if sometimes apparently before the age, is never be hind it. By the People we do not mean the leading residents of cities, merchants and money-lenders: their business is to buy and sell and care for the interests of trade and for profits on stocks and loans ; we mean the People who are scattered over the wide expanse of the country, who till the land and make the work shop vocal, whose good sense erywhere but Bombay, where a slight decline of is both just and generous, whose taith in Freedom. both imports and exports had taken place. The Humanity and Progress is enextinguished and hving, and not counted in dollars and cents.

It takes courage to face an enemy in battle . takes more courage greatly to confront a great emergency in politics. Then ordinary considerations are worthless. The traveler in a straight and narrow path must not be afraid of shadows , the leader in a political struggle like that now passing will best consult his own reputation and prospects by taking counsel of neither prospects nor reputs tion. He that would gain his life must lose it says the inspired record.

We do not criticise the manner of Mr. Web ster's speech; we do not find fault with its de tails; all that is of minor consequence. It is it substance that we pronounce unequal to the occasion and unworthy of its author.

It does not do all that Slavery has been beseed ing of Mr. Webster. It does not profess to offer 30 0', nor any minor compromise between Slavery Extension and Freedom . but it offers one, not with standing. It takes the ground of Senator BELL Tennessee. It proposes, not directly but indirectly to balance California with a new Slave State taker from Texas, and to abandon the Proviso for the

Mr. Webster says the Proviso is ascless an negatory, because nature has excluded Slavery from California and New-Mexico. How has sh excluded it? By climate and soil, he will say This has been said before often enough, and is sone the truer for being said again. Have these advocates for natural exclusion never heard of Russin? In that country there are fifty million of slaves distributed through every variety of cli mate and soil from that of North Carolina to that of Greenland. Have they never heard of Mary land nor Kentucky, States which raise neither cot ton, nor rice, nor sugar, and yet employ slaves? It is abourd to say that Slavery knows any limita tions of climate, or soil, or occupation. It goes wherever it can be made profitable. If the law guaranteed slave property in California, can any man who knows enough to count four fail to see that thousands of slaves would in two months be dig ging gold there? Beside, Slavery is not a mer industrial institution in this country, and does not depend for its existence upon its profits alone. I is a great political machine, whereby the minorit in the Republic has long ruled the majority. That is why it is adhered to with such fanatical persistence. That is why in Kentucky, for example, it resists every consideration which interest and sound reason urge for its removal. It is not profitable there, but it remains notwithstanding. So it would have got into California, had it dared go there : so it will now occupy New Mexico, unless it is restrained. Mr. Webster thinks the Provise is originally of God's enacting, and therefore will not reaffirm it principle of legislation as well as new point of rhetoric. Huherto it has been thought necessary for human laws to follow another course The law of God is freedom, and yet by Constitutions and statutes we establish and guaranty free dem. But, does Mr. Webster mean to have us un derstand that God designs some portions of the interpret any part of the divine will as ordaining any climate, any soil, any locality, for the word and inhumanities of bondage? If God has specially enacted that they shall not exist in New Mexico. there must be some places for which he has made a different enactment. But this whole argument is puerile. Mr. Foote might have used it with propriety, but not so the man who speaks for Massa

The time was when Mr. Webster saw the Wil met Provise in another aspect. We do not object to his changing his sentiments, but cannot find his reasons sufficient to convert us also.

The position that Northern States and their Citi zens are morally bound to recapture fugitive Slaves may be good for a lawyer, but is not good for a Man. The provision is on the face of the Constitu tion. True, but that does not make it the duty of Mr. Webster nor any other buman being, when a panting fugitive presents himself at his door begging for shelter and the means of escape, to arrest and bind him and hand him over to the parsuers who are bot upon his trail In this the Constitution does not reenact the will of God, but the will of Sa tan, and so is nugatory among freemen, though you conforce it with all possible statutes and penalties.
When the public sentiment gets ahead of a law, that law loses all efficiency. Pass a law here in New-York that a man who steals a sheep shall be consideration of the samuson of Cairfornia.

Numerous House bills were taken up and referred The consideration of the President's California Message was inged, and does Mr. Webster suppose he could find a judge or a jury to execute it? Just so with the provision for the return of fugitive Slaves. It remains in force nominally and legally if you will, but morally it is abolished in the Free States, has long been so, and so ever will be. Public sentiment is shead of it and cannot be dragged back again .-We cannot be converted into Slave catchers, nor can Shave catchers operate freely among us. Every had to their employers. If Mr. Webster supposes that any mere logal morality can overrule that which God puts into the heart of every genuine freeman, he is much mistaken. We have read this speech not without regret. The opportunity was and is yet a great one for a man endowed with a great mind, a great heart and courage up with the times. There was and is an opportunity for a man who should come not with a new compromise. for this is not the day of compro mises, but with a calm, comprehensive and impregnable assertion of the principles and policy freedom with an utterance of what is in the heart of the People. We should rejuice had Mr. Webster taken hold of this opportunity. But he has not, and such opportunities, when rejected,

-But the Union! Preserve the Union! Will you agree to no Compromise for the sake of the Union? shout in loud chorus all those whose sympathies are strong with Slavery as well as a frieldened few who love Freedom. No, we agree to no compromise; none is necessary; none is practica-politicians, but by an overruling necessity of things It cannot be dissolved. It is not only the enact azimirable Constitution, by the whole power of the American people and by the clear-headed, truemorning's paper. Among other articles is an ac. now nuides its destinies. Disunion is achimera!-
